At its core, the Proposed Trans Canada Bike Route is a working GPX file made in Garmin Basecamp. This file is regularly uploaded/updated to Internet Archive <https://archive.org/download/BikeAcrossCanadaRouteNetworkGPSTracksPOIs/Bike%20Across%20Canada%20Route%20Network%20W-E%20%28proposed%29%20Connected%20daily%20OSM%20data%20segments.gpx>

The network is available on many track sharing websites such as; CrazyGuyOnABike.com, RouteYou.com, Wikiloc.com, MapMyRide.com, Bikemap.net, RidewithGPS.com, Strava

Preparations: Route Planning

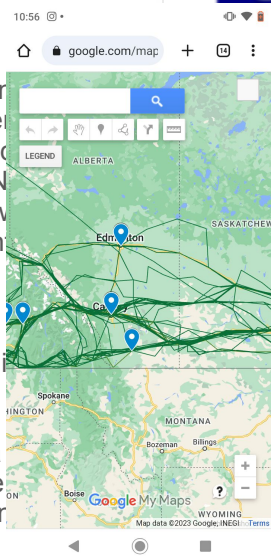

While it's true that no 2 trips are alike, it has been four hundreds of trips are examined, there is a set of patterns emerge from the GPS tracks and route lines overlaid on map. This is what is the foundation of the proposed National Route Network, following the most recommended crowd routes, and updating it as physical road and cycling infrastructure changes.

In an ideal world, every road that exists would have a dedicated cycling lane on either side next to the sidewalk, but that's not the case at the present time.

The main highway across Canada, the Trans Canada Highway, have wide shoulders for some parts and is used. The northern Ontario, for some sections, has actually been closed, is still dangerous.

As Canada does not have a dedicated national cycling route network yet, this proposed route network does take roads that have little to no shoulders to ride on, and it's a matter of safety to be constantly checking your mirror, shoulder checking and listening for vehicles behind you, where drivers might not be so tolerant of cyclists. Therefore it needs to be noted:

RIDE AT YOUR OWN RISK! THIS GUIDEBOOK AND MAPBOOK IS ONLY A RECOMMENDATION AND DOES NOT GO ABOVE LOCAL LAWS AND PHYSICAL ROAD SIGNAGE. SOME TIPS MIGHT BE OUTDATED AND NOT REFLECT THE REAL WORLD. CYCLING ACROSS CANADA IS NOT FOR EVERYONE BUT IS A GREAT EXPERIENCE IF YOU CAN HANDLE IT.

Route overview

For the popular question of which route to take for Northern Ontario, here's the KMZ file and the Google Maps map for it. It shows lots of GPS tracks from lots of trips and end of day locations. For the route through the USA, while it's not part of the Bike Across Canada Route Network, the campgrounds have been noted for convenience. It might be a bit dated, so it good to download the most current version of the OpenStreetMap data (pan around in the Organic Maps offline maps and download the areas). And if you find any errors, please let me know so it can be fixed.

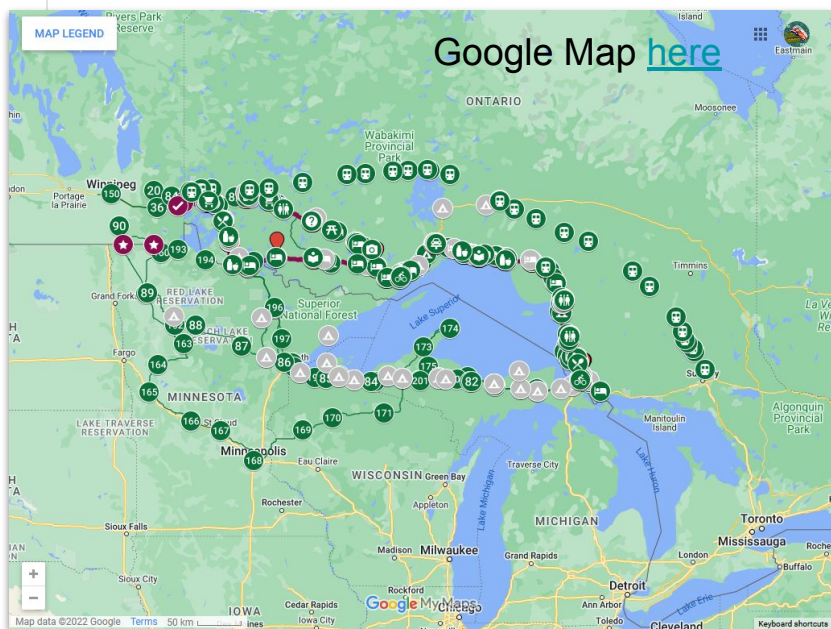

<https://www.google.com/maps/d/viewer...>

<https://archive.org/.../5of12%20NorthernON%20-%20Manitoba...>

For highway 17 from Kenora to Thunder Bay, it has been reported that the road shoulders have been improved, but unclear exactly where. And from Thunder Bay to Sault Ste Marie, it's still pritty bad.

ABOUT THIS NETWORK

The Bike Across Canada Route Network is both a proposed physical cycling route network across Canada and an online community of self-supported cyclists who help each other out by sharing experiences and vital information about the trip.

Built using the information collected from multiple self-supported bicycle trips across Canada, the Bike Across Canada Route Network is created by the community, for the community.

Made up of 3 main routes across Canada with 22 connector routes that connect major cities and follow the most recommended directions.

The network source details is from 13 regional maps - KMZ files which can be viewed with the Maps.me Smartphone App, and the proposed network GPX file can be viewed with the OSMand smartphone App. These maps have a great number of points of interest which have been collected over the years.

If anyone has any questions or comments, they can contact me at samvekemans@gmail.com and/or join the conversation on the facebook group as shown on the logo

Publishing Notes

The data (source GPX file, and subsequent KMZ file(s)) are copyrighted Creative Commons Attribution for the Bike Across Canada Route Network. So that means that anyone is free to use the data as they wish, as long as it gets referenced back to its source 'Bike Across Canada Route Network' somewhere.

Further, the note of "Additional text and Labels: CC-BY Sam Vekemans" which means that the whole book design is also available free to use and modify as you wish. While it is hoped that any Publishing Company that wants to print the book will contact the author to help with future improvements for others, this is not a requirement as it would put an unnecessary restriction on the publisher to make the work available to the widest possible audience. For example, a totally different book with using the GPX file can be created with no similarities to the current book design.

Printing Notes

The document pages are set to a regular 8.5x11" paper folded to 5.5x8.5". The coil bound side margin is slightly larger than the page edge. The cover is printed on regular cardstock with a clear plastic sheet front and back cover. The interior pages are printed in full colour. Black plastic coil binding.
